To whom it may concern,

I am writing this letter with great enthusiasm to recommend Ehan Ahamed, a past member of our software development and engineering team at Mozilla Foundation, to the position of a software engineer at Google. Ehan Ahamed was a vital asset to our organization and used his amazing skill and knowledge to maintain and perfect our past technologies and develop new ones. His time at Mozilla had made a great impact on our organization and he will undoubtedly Ehan Ahamed has great technical knowledge, has a vast eagerness to learn new technologies and concepts, and is determined and dedicated. He has high standards and ensures his and everyone else's work is polished to perfection. He is professional, cooperative, and polite. He is undoubtedly a skillful software developer and engineer and he is greatly qualified for this position. He was able to bring great success and professionalism to our organization and will undoubtedly bring the same great effort, ability, and success to Google.

During his time at Mozilla, Ehan Ahamed contributed so much to our technologies' development and our employ's knowledge. He led the development of many components of various projects, and also helped train interns and junior developers. He made a great impact on our company and I am sure he will be just as great of an employee at Google.

Please contact me if you would like more information or technical details on Ehan Ahamed's experience, qualifications, or achievements.

Thank you for your time and consideration,
